A colorful multi-media recap of the greatest show on earth bouncing off a satellite

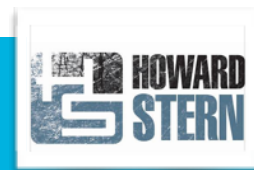

#SnowStern

An apocalyptic storm predicted for New York City at the start of the week never materialized into anything more than a few inches. While most of the Stern staff prepared themselves for the worst, Sal managed to remain completely unaware of the pending blizzard. Luckily, his uninformed self, led us to his “bag.” Thanks to SnowStern of 2015 we finally found out what embarrasses Sal- the contents of his emergency overnight bag. From his precious Rogaine to his blemish make-up, he’s got more hygiene products than Rite-Aid. Here’s a BTS (behind-the-scenes) of the bag revelation:

As the “essentials” hunkered down in the city Monday night and easily returned to work on Tuesday, Scott the Engineer stayed home and went sledding and bowling instead.

Here’s a clip from the show about Scott’s glorious “Snow day”:

The Hi-Pitch Erik Situation

Hi-Pitch Erik caught up with Gary at a Boat Show last Thursday and the pictures surfaced revealing he’s still the size of a boat. Howard’s worried he’s the next Wack-Packer to go and who can argue with that. Erik called in to defend himself and insists he’s still working on his weight. He also wanted to remind everyone that he’s not feeble, he’s dull.

Howard’s Bar Mitzvah Memories

Anytime Howard recounts his unpleasant days reading from the Torah is always special. This week was no different as he proclaimed,

“This got pussy 3,000 years ago in Pharoah’s time.”

Howard's Colonoscopy Prep Sounds

Another treat this week came when Howard revealed the audio he recorded during his colonoscopy prep at home.

The usually unflappable Richard wanted to puke- as did most everyone else.

JK Simmons

Oscar nominee JK Simmons from “Whiplash” visited on Wednesday.

Ronnie's Hot Chick of the Week - Dude

Ronnie's big-boned selection caused quite the stir.

Although not nearly as much as this old school photo that surfaced on Ronnie's twitter feed. Duuuuuu!
